

Table of Contents

Acknowledgments — V

Abbreviations — IX

Introduction — 1

Chapter One

Why Did Heidegger “Turn” to Kant? — 5

- 1 Attunement and Meaning: Saying the “Unsaid” — 7
- 2 “Philosophy on this Earth” — The Lasting Importance of the First Critique — 15
- 3 Addressing the Critics — 28

Chapter Two

The Crossing from Kant to Heidegger — 36

- 1 The Translation “Key”: Heidegger’s Decision — 38
- 2 The Tribunal of Reason and the Practice of Language — 48
- 3 The Doubling of Imagination — 61

Chapter Three

Turnings: Of Time and Being — 70

- 1 Errancy and the Forgottenness of Being — 72
- 2 The Overlooked Linchpin in Heidegger’s Problematic — 81
- 3 The Unthought Dimension of the “Play-Space” — 88
- 4 Reestablishing Distance within Proximity — 93

Chapter Four

Praxis and the Experience of Being — 100

- 1 Metontology and the Ethical Turn — 100
- 2 Saying and Doing — 112
- 3 The “Administrator” of Freedom — 119

Chapter Five

Translating the Political and the Rise of Technology — 134

- 1 Anti-Humanism? — 135
- 2 Thing and World — 150
- 3 Being-Historical Thinking and the Space of Dialogue — 162

Chapter Six

Echoing the “Unsaid”: Opening the Question of Language — 170

- 1 Sensus Communis and Language — 172
- 2 Imagination vs. Representationalism — 179
- 3 “... Without a Concept” — 191

Chapter Seven

The Ellipsis of the Third Critique: From Art to Nature — 195

- 1 Of Things Heavenly and Earthly — 196
- 2 Unwinding the Kantian Premise — 204
- 3 The Mystery of Nature and the Idiom of the Word — 214

Postscript

The “Echo” of Kant and the Path of Thinking — 223

Bibliography — 225

Index — 239